

Perry Vale Safer Neighbourhoods Team Lewisham - Capital Clean-Up & Community Payback Project - 2007

METROPOLITAN
POLICE

Working together for a safer London

Supported by

Case study: Perry Vale ward

- The communal gardens at the rear of 75-133 Elsinore Road had been a place where household refuse and unwanted furniture had been dumped for a number of years. The communal gardens were heavily overgrown and afford cover to the local youths and associated anti-social behaviour.
- The Perry Vale Safer Neighbourhoods team identified that this area would benefit from the Capital Clean-Up Campaign and Community Payback scheme. On Saturday 31st March 2007, offenders undertaking community orders aged between 16 and 30 started the mammoth task of site clearance.
- The project was completed in June 2007 and reported crime in this area has reduced significantly greatly improving the quality of life for local residents.
- The before and after photographic evidence shown on the following slides demonstrates the problem and clear benefits after the clean up activity.
- This project featured in the Capital Clean-Up Campaign 2007 DVD Film.

Before Community Payback

4

Before Community Payback

5

Before Community Payback

6

Before Community Payback

After Community Payback

Working together for a safer London

After Community Payback

METROPOLITAN
POLICE

Working together for a safer London

After Community Payback

After Community Payback

11

Perry Vale Safer Neighbourhoods Team members

